

My Dream Job

Chocolate Taste Tester for Harrods

Just last Saturday my dream job was advertised in the paper. I'm already updating my C.V. because I know I'm going to get this job. Why am I so confident you may ask? Because it's obvious that I am ideally suited to being the chocolate taste tester for Harrods of London. I've been in training for years!! There are several things that I'd enjoy about the job; I love chocolate, the pay is fantastic, it would involve lots of travel and it would motivate me to exercise more.

So I'd love your recommendation when I apply for the job, but first let me convince you.

As I was saying, I love chocolate. Chocolate must be the world's most supreme food! Of Course I have tried lots of chocolate, but this job would enable me to try every variety known to mankind. I mean Harrods stock absolutely every single type of quality chocolate. Because I've already tried heaps of varieties, I am already on my way to becoming a connoisseur. That means that I know quality chocolate when I taste it. Harrods will be pleased to have my talents and expertise. The best thing is that I never tire of eating good chocolate, so I'll be dedicated to the job for years.

Then there's the pay - $150 000 per year is not to be sneezed at. This would be a huge increase for me. This well paid job would give me the opportunity to do lots of things that I've always wanted to do. After all, we all know that "Money makes the world go round" (or is that chocolate?). I'd be able to get out and about a lot more than I do now, and I would be able to buy my dream car – that Porsche 911T. Actually, maybe Harrods could give me that car as a work car seeing as how I'd have to travel so much!! Oooh, this is so exciting, the possibilities are endless.

Did I mention the travel? Getting on an aeroplane is sooo exciting. Well, if you travel business class that is! I've done a fair bit of travel before, through Asia and Europe, but this job will give me the opportunity to see an awful lot more of the world. Harrods as you know is in London, just a hop skip and a jump from all those fabulous places like Paris, Venice, Rome and Greece. I will be able to visit the Louvre, the Eiffel Tower, Acropolis and many other wonderful sights. I can't wait! Then there is London. I'd be living in London. Every weekend that I wasn't heading to some exotic place, I could shop till I dropped, sight see or go to one of the many shows or concerts. Of course I would be able to afford the very best of everything. This job gets better and better. Chocolate Taste Tester for Harrods, that's the job for me!

Of course, there is one small down side to the job. If I eat too much chocolate I might get fat! This is an occasion for Green Hat thinking! I've got it; I'll just have to exercise more to balance my chocolate intake. That will be great because everyone knows that increased exercise is good for you. And of course, the pieces of chocolate are very small so I won't really be eating much at all.

So, I can't wait to hear back from Harrods. My C.V is on its way and I'm sure they'll contact me any day now. After all, I am obviously the best person for the job of Chocolate Taste Tester at Harrods. I love chocolate, the pay is great, I'd be travelling heaps and I'd be motivated to exercise more.

Oooh, better get to the phone, I'm sure Harrods will be ringing soon telling me that I've got the job. Must run, bye!
